as we see it

■ Have we been exposed to so much fictional violence that we are less likely to be shocked and sickened by the real thing? Could it be that our newspapers, magazines, books, movies and television helped set the psychological stage for this summer's riots?

And if it could be proved that the mass media have reduced our abhorrence for violence, what should be done?

■ Certainly we cannot countenance censorship of any means of communication. Newspapers and magazines and broadcasters must report the news, interpret it and place it in perspective. If the news is of violence, there is no alternative but to report it.

Drama often rests on a framework of conflict. Such conflict can lead logically to physical conflict, to the violence we see in the movies and on television and read about in books.

■ The underprivileged, the uneducated, the jobless and the frustrated have neither the caution nor the responsibility of the privileged. They are, perhaps, more likely to adopt the violence to which all of us have been exposed, as a means to an end.

For this generation of youngsters—and it was young people who most often participated in this summer's arson and looting—the virus of violence has taken hold.

■ But for the future, for children who are now growing up, it should be possible to reduce the amount of violence—unnecessary violence, phony violence—in our mass media.

A little less shooting in movies. Less fighting for the sake of fighting on television. Less emphasis on gory pictures in magazines. Not quite so much sadism in paperbacks. These logical changes might do some good.

■ They should be voluntary changes, made informally, with each man's conscience—be he writer, editor or producer—as his guide.

TV TELETYPE*: HOLLYWOOD: JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS:

ABC has added BARBARA EDEN (I Dream of Jeannie) and ANNA MARIA ALBERGHETTI to its list of glamorous stars who will appear on specials next season. Miss EDEN and Miss ALBERGHETTI will co-star in a production of "Kismet." Previously signed as hostesses are SOPHIA LOREN, GRACE KELLY, DEBBIE REYNOLDS and CAROL CHANNING . . . FRANK PRICE, former executive producer of The Virginian, is now producing RAYMOND BURR's new series Ironside. He replaces the veteran COLLIER YOUNG, who'll make a picture.

MARTHA HYER plays an attorney on Judd, for the Defense, the new ABC series with CARL BETZ (The Donna Reed Show) . . . PAT BOONE, whose half-hour NBC daytime show went off the air, is coming back in a 90-minute syndicated version. It'll be called Pat Boone in Hollywood, a chatter-type program with some performing guests . . . When ROCK HUDSON is host of The Kraft Music Hall this fall he'll spoof Hollywood musicals. With that format he can get away with singing off-key.

JACK PALANCE's terrifying "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" on ABC next season has OSCAR HOMOLKA, LEO GENN and British music-hall star TESSIE O'SHEA in the cast . . . EDDIE FISHER, BUDDY HACKETT and JULIET PROWSE are in DANNY THOMAS's "It's Greek to Me" episode of his anthology series. It's a parody on Greek mythology. THOMAS and his co-producer, AARON SPELLING, also hired WALTER PIDGEON, HAL MARCH, JEANNE CRAIN and DOROTHY PROVINE for another segment, "My Friend Tony."

ANTHONY EISLEY, onetime Hawaiian Eye detective, is in the movie "Star," the GERTRUDE LAWRENCE biography . . . HOWARD DUFF and his Felony Squad use JOHN WAYNE's yacht, a converted mine sweeper, to solve a crime this fall . . . Producers BILL MELENDEZ and LEE MENDELSON are working with cartoonist CHARLES SCHULZ on another "Peanuts" special, "He's Your Dog, Charlie Brown," all about Snoopy. It's for CBS . . . MGM is making a series based on "Anatomy of a Murder," previously a book and a movie. The studio says its main character will be a small-town criminal lawyer who "would prefer to stay home, fishing." Who wouldn't?

It's hard to believe those bright eyes were part of the storm center that kept you up half the night! But the very young quickly forget an emerging tooth or an upset that leaves you bleary-eyed in the morning!

Happy way to start a busy day is with a sunny strained juice from Gerber and a jar of ready-to-serve cereal. We've 10 juice treats to choose from and three ready-to-serve cereals, each brightly combined with applesauce and banana. Especially handy on busy mornings or when baby travels.

Samson should have been so lucky. No Philistines these—the young ladies shown here practicing their ancient tonsorial art. The girls' leader (and the owner of the shop) is Gene Shacove, one of the top Hollywood hair stylists (women's hair, that is), and among his customers are many TV stars. Shacove got the idea for a men's shop manned (?) by women when he was in the service and stationed in Hawaii. (It seems that female barbers are rather common in that particular archipelago.) Although the girls are not licensed to shave, they perform other duties with admirable élan. First off, they were instructed in haircutting by the most famous barber in Hollywood, Jay Sebring. Other specialties of the house are shampoos, manicures, pedicures and shoe shines. A shampoo, cut and set costs a piddling $7—a price that actors such as Bob Dowdell (Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea), left; Stephen Young (Judd, for the Defense), center; and Mark Goddard (Lost in Space) are happy to pay. Like Shacove's lady's shop, the barbering establishment has become quite a social hangout. One can see why.

Color Them

Commercials in color outsell black-and-white competitors

Madison Avenue's manipulators, according to the latest study of color television and its effects, are discovering that color TV's selling powers drastically outstrip those of its monochromatic poor relation.

The point is, everyone knows that roses are red and violets blue. But when you watch black-and-white television, you see dingy gray roses. Consequently, there's a credibility gap. You don't get really involved. And that is the key word, says the "Psy-Color-Gy" report.

That's the coy name of this scientific examination of the impact of color television on that most precious of commodities, the psyche—and on its neurological in-laws, the emotions.

"Psy-Color-Gy" represents the combined efforts of Robert M. Hoffman, vice president for marketing and research of a group called Television Advertising Representatives; and Dr. Ernest Dichter, head of the Institute for Motivational Research.

"Color," says the report, "is a state of mind; color is emotion." Which means, unsuspecting viewer, that you are vulnerable; you are highly susceptible to color because you are, face it, largely an emotional creature. Witness the answers given by more than 400 average housewife, mother and grandmother types who participated in the battery of tests and interviews devised by Dichter and Hoffman.

The first of these was a carefully controlled experiment to measure the advantage of color commercials over their black-and-white counterparts. Identical commercials (20 in all), of both the tinted and untinted variety, were screened before six groups totaling 300 women. After each screening the subjects were asked to respond—positively, negatively or neutrally—to eight statements concerning their emotional reactions.

There were enough more ayes for color commercials than for black-and-white to give color, right now, a 17 to 34 percent advantage—and a potential advantage of better than 50 percent.

However, what's big news for advertisers doesn't necessarily have to be good news for the public. A few hypersensitive persons have been known to react so violently to certain colors that they fell into a sort of stupor known as "color shock"; but that's not in the realm of possibility for most viewers. About the worst an average color-set owner can realistically expect is an occasional, rather silly lapse from normal behavior. (And by the way, the longer you own a color set, say the researchers, the stronger its impact will be. Tests also revealed that you'll be more sensitive to color if you're under 40.)

The symptoms of this malady, manifested by several participants in the study, may well become the most popular psychological hang-up of the next decade. They're unsettling at best, and you ought to be warned.

Successful

and here's why . . .

BY JUDY JOBIN

Dr. Dichter describes, for instance, the "Aha! experience," which is more likely to be induced by color commercials than by black-and-white. The Aha! experience is that moment of truth when Hannah Housewife, on seeing a color image of, say, Jawgrab Denture Adhesive in pale lavender, gasps with insight and cries jubilantly, "I saw that in the supermarket yesterday and that's just how it looks!"

There's a chance that Hannah, only temporarily unhinged, may emerge relatively unscarred from that near-epiphany—but only to another neurosis. Even more rattling, for instance, is color television's ability to diminish by one-half the viewer's psychological distance from the goings-on in the mini-screen world. This tends to create a dangerous sense of intimacy.

An example is the case of a wanton Bronx housewife who relates (with an undertone of lust and a licentious eye), "When I watch color I feel like I can reach right out and grab whatever I am watching, especially that Illya Kuryakin. He's so sexy."

Luckily for Mr. Kuryakin, color can do nothing to reduce physical distance between the desired and the desirous. And unfortunately for our Bronx housewife, neither Mr. Kuryakin nor a reasonable facsimile can be purchased at her local A&P.

The Hoffman-Dichter study classifies a variety of polychromatic viewing experiences, including deep "emotional involvement . . . security," for instance, which means, in the poignant words of a Baltimore housewife—"With color I feel part of whatever is going on, even in commercials."

And what that means, in terms of television's realities, is that you're going to experience an intimate, albeit foolish, psychosomatic involvement with the commercial world's distressing crises: headache, backache, dingy washdays, and the lot.

In fact color brings television much closer to being an element of "massage" as Marshall McLuhan defines it: "The medium is what happens to you." And it doesn't happen rationally, so you can't fight back. Color works subtly—it indicates mood: Blue is peaceful, it allows you to take mental short cuts; red means stop or it means pain. None of that has to be verbalized.

Thus the advertiser, with less explaining and describing to do (he no longer has to say "Look for the red-and-white package"), has more time for his actual sales message.

Dr. Dichter (who sounds, at times, like an early-vintage horror-movie hero) describes exactly how color TV will "happen to" the viewer. The latter may be shocked and bewildered to find himself engaged in an absurd practice called "mental rehearsal" in which he unconsciously rehearses the use of a product in his mind. And from there it is a logical step to the so-called "opening night"; i.e., the actual purchases of the product.

—the clarification of background and detail—can have morbid side effects. Witness this shameless display from an elderly Florida woman. “You get all the details. One night we actually spotted on one of the performers a couple of black hairs on her skin. It was clear and real. You wouldn’t have been able to see it on black and white television.” The same lady also expressed interest in seeing sunburn commercials in color. “That commercial where the girl is in pain would show up very well in color.”

So much for the freak-outs. On the other side of the coin, color effected a minor miracle in Phoenix, Ariz., where a hard-of-hearing housewife reported: “Since we got our color television, I don’t need to turn the volume up. For some reason, I can hear better when I watch color shows.” That happened because color adds a dimension of depth.

“Psy-Color-Gy” reports that, according to results of its word test, people feel “friendly” rather than “reserved” toward color television. Which is really a very nice way to feel toward TV, considering the time devoted to it.

The aesthetic element can’t be overlooked either. Several years ago, David Sarnoff, who pioneered for color as far back as 1930, lyricized: “What is a rose in black and white? What is this world without color, without the clouds and skies and the rainbow?” What is it, indeed? This reporter is not against progress (who would dare be?), not against red roses, not even—heaven knows—against pale lavender denture adhesive. But she simply can’t rid herself of the terrible vision of that wanton Bronx housewife forever lusting after Illya Kuryakin—forever frustrated, forever unfulfilled.

When Tarzan wrestles with a lion, by gosh, he wrestles with a lion!

...And lurking in the jungle bushes was a naked Beverly Hills tennis player who believes he is TARZAN!

BY JAMES KOMACK

I thought I'd been exposed to all the madnesses of show business—until recently. I went to Mexico City to direct and found lurking in the jungle bushes a naked Beverly Hills tennis player who believes he is Tarzan!

I remember first meeting Ron Ely (rhymes with really) in an art gallery. At the time he seemed only a good-looking, tall young man—of which there are thousands in Los Angeles—dressed in tennis whites and peering inquisitively at a Marchand painting. In fact he was so goodlooking that I would have immediately cast him in Mister Roberts, the television series that I was then producing, if I had not been afraid he'd look better than my star.

Now there he was in the Churubusco Studios—Ron Ely—naked, except for his Tarzan loincloth, which looks like a Sunset Strip teeny-bopper's male mini-skirt, his long sun-browned body laced with animal claw marks, his left shoulder wired from a 35-foot fall, the bridge of his nose swollen from a recent break—and not a Marchand painting in sight.

He extended his hand, flashed his huge white teeth, popped his dimples into place and grinned, to let me know I was in the presence of a star. Forget the tennis whites! All I could see was an old childhood vision of Johnny Weissmuller swinging through the trees, chasing Maureen O'Sullivan and crying "Ah-ye-yah-ye-yah!"

Director Komack with star Ron Ely.

I settled down to work; scouted locations, checked sets, looked at the caged lions, tigers and panthers, presumably responsible for the broken bones, and had the disquieting feeling I was being put on. Could this guy and these animals be for real? In my innocence I asked the animal trainer, "When do you put the animals to sleep?" He answered, "At night, when they're sleepy."

Now I became really flustered. I tried to think of the Spanish word for "tranquilizer." I couldn't, so I said it in English. "Tranquilize 'em?" he glared. "Tar-baby (that's what they call Ron down there) fights them the way they are."

Later, I found out about Ron's broken nose. It had been broken many times. The last time it happened while the cameras were rolling. A fellow actor (Ely declines to work with stuntmen) swung a little too hard and missed. Ely calmly poked his index fingers into his nostrils, reset the bone and continued to act. Ay-yee-yah-yee-yah!

Next day I started shooting. We were in a rocky mountain area and I had spent an hour setting up a spectacular zoom shot when Ron showed up—limping. He had torn a hamstring the day before and there was a fast-spreading blood clot in his leg, turning it black. The Tarzan company doctor took one look and immediately ordered Tar-baby off his feet.

The blood clot was spreading. It could pop into the lungs and kill him. But Ron insisted. He ordered the makeup man to cover the discoloration with Max Factor jungle suntan and the doctor to give him a shot to keep his blood from clotting. This meant that if he stumbled and cut himself running up that mountain, he could bleed to death. I argued, I pleaded, I begged. "It's just a setup, Ron. I really don't need it. I can find another way."

"Stop begging
I said just one!"

"You set up the shot, Jimmie!" He gave me a flat, hard, determined look. I wanted to say "Why?" but you can't explore a man's entire emotional life while a hundred-man TV crew waits. Also, I knew I wouldn't get a straight answer. So I returned his look, equally flat and set: "Really, Ely?" Then I announced: "OK, we shoot it. Tar-baby plays the rest of this picture with a limp!"

Why did he do it? Because Tarzan would do it. And Ron Ely is Tarzan!

A few days later we were in a freezing cold jungle stream. Ron had to swim about 20 feet underwater toting two young actresses. I had my camera underwater, too, and it was an exciting shot. Ron gently explained to the actresses how to swim underwater, act and hold onto his loincloth without removing it. I yelled, "Action!" They submerged.

I started into the crystal-clear, icy water. Tarzan had the scene under control. The three of them were moving gracefully toward the camera and registering all the proper emotions. When they surfaced moments later, I told them, "Fine. It's a print." I asked the smaller actress if she was all right. "I think so," she hollered. I hollered back, "What do you mean—think so?" She smiled happily, "I can't swim." Ron pulled her out. No sense in asking her why she did such a foolhardy thing. It wasn't foolhardy; she was with Tarzan!

Later Tar-baby had a leopard fight on an interior set. "How will you do it, Ron?" I asked, trying to keep the professionalism in my voice. "Like it's written," he answered. "But Ron—" my voice was starting to rise, I was blowing my cool. "It's a real leopard! It doesn't know it's acting. And it has all of it's teeth!"

"If you want," Ron offered, "you don't have to be with the cameras, Jimmie. I can—" I cut him off immediately. No chance, pal! I may have my assorted anxieties and occasional moments of sanity but the opportunity to direct a real live leopard with a real live Tarzan! I will be there! I will yell, "Action!" I will yell, "Cut!"

There's no place to cover Ron. No way to give him protective clothing. Just run three cameras at once and pray. The trainers released the snarling, angry leopard and Ron jumped into the scene. He grappled with the leopard. Sweat poured off everyone except Ron. He can't perspire; he is Tarzan! The leopard twisted away and turned angrily to the humming of the three cameras—and me. He growled. I heard my own voice, firm and controlled: "C'mon Spotty. Don't stare at me! I'm The Director! Get in there and act! Go get Tarzan!"

It's not the best motivation I've ever given, but it worked! The leopard leaped on Ron. Ron grabbed him, deftly avoiding his slashing claws, neatly jerking his head out of the way of the jaw snaps. He held the leopard on its underside and tried to force it out of the door of the set, but the animal had no intention of being forced out. It coiled and leaped again. Twisting, turning, dancing, bullying, Ron in his male teenybopper mini-skirt and the leopard looking like some freaky, far-out kid at The Cheetah! Ely threw the leopard out of the door and I yelled, "Cut!" Everyone sagged. Except Ron—he was outside, helping the trainers get the leopard back into his cage.

Why, Ron, why?

Shortly before I returned to the sane, dull, normal atmosphere of Beverly Hills, we sat in Ron's unpretentious trailer, having a Mexican box lunch. "Ever worked with animals before?" I asked casually. He shook his head. I asked, "Well then, how did you get this way?"

"I was a good athlete as a kid," he said, hungrily taking a bite of a mango. (He grew up in Amarillo, Texas.) "One day some big guy hit me and I went running home to Mother. She saw me from her window and scolded me. 'You go back and hit that boy! Don't you come running home to me crying.' I ran back and belted the guy. He went running to his mother, crying.

"Ever read the original Tarzan stories?" he asked suddenly. "They're beautiful. They're about an educated man who returns to the environment he knows best, the jungle. And in that world he seeks truth, honor and man's lost humanity to man."

"Is that what you've done?" I asked.

He didn't even hear me. "This Tarzan," he was saying, "it's the part I've been waiting for all my life. It's my big chance. I've never had a part. I've never been in a quality series. It's a good feeling, so good that somehow I can't believe I will ever be seriously hurt."

Later we went out for dinner together. The talk was about hippies and protest movements—for a while. But then the subject got back to where Ron always likes to keep it, on his own personal protest movement, the one that has made him the star he always, and at any cost, wanted to be. Then I knew. He never really had stopped slugging it out with that big kid back in Amarillo.

I finally had to ask him: "Ron, are you afraid?"

He took his time in answering. Then he said, simply and unaffectedly, "Yes."

GOOD STUFF

NBC's "An Evening at Tanglewood" was a super blend of great music and fine television coverage. As one of the teen-agers of today who is fed up with asinine programs which are supposedly catering to the tastes of today's young people, it is a great pleasure to be able to watch a program which credits the public with some sense of good taste.

SMILE WHEN YOU SAY THAT!

Even a college professor should know that a reviewer is basically a reporter when he expresses one man's view, his own ["Review," Aug. 19]. Any novice journalist knows he must quote accurately; it is a cardinal rule. I have to give Prof. Martin Maloney an "F" for frustration (as in "Those who can't teach . . .") when he "quotes" from a recent episode of The Virginian which I wrote. None of the dialog he "quoted" appeared in my script. I can just picture the professor reviewing "Hamlet" and "quoting"; "to be or not to be, that is the hang-up." The professor wrote that his teen-age daughter, (and I quote), "... a penetrating critic, sniffled gently through this whole proceeding." If the story brought tears to Miss Maloney perhaps she inherits her sensitivity from her

NET Books Stalin's Daughter

Ever since her televised press conference last April 26, following her flight to freedom, Josef Stalin's daughter has been incommunicado to press and TV. Mrs. Svetlana Alliluyeva, as she prefers to be known, will emerge, however, on Oct. 2, the date her highly touted memoirs are to reach U.S. bookstalls, to sit for an hour-long live interview on a National Educational Television hook-up of about 118 stations. NET officials crowed last week that they stole a march on the big commercial chains in lining up the Soviet's latest, most attractive defector. NET's "in": A WGBH-TV (Boston) producer of documentaries, Henry Morgenthau III, whose late father was FDR's Secretary of the Treasury. He also was a boyhood chum of Gen. Edward S. Greenbaum, now Mrs. Alliluyeva's U.S. attorney. WGBH's Morgenthau will produce the NET special.

Princess Radziwill, Jacqueline Kennedy's sister, will make her TV acting debut next winter in "Laura" rather than in "Voice of the Turtle." Explained producer David Susskind: "Laura" was what we most wanted to do, but we couldn't clear TV rights with 20th Century-Fox, so we lined up 'Voice of the Turtle' instead. Now we've got the rights to 'Laura.'" Truman Capote will adapt the play as a two-hour special for ABC.

Officially it's still The Huntley-Brinkley Report, but NBC's evening news could well be redubbed The Huntley-Brinkley - Chancellor - Vanocur - Kiker-Perkins Report. Launched without a trace of fanfare last week, presumably on a tryout basis, the six-man newscast, featuring whattayamakeofit dialog between the principals, stirred but relatively little immediate furor. After three editions, producer Robert (Shad) Northshield reported, "We've had about 20 letters and telegrams. Only two were unfavorable." Rival TV newsmen privately gave NBC an "A" for nerve in rocking the boat (H-B has long been the top-rated news show) but were skeptical about the success of the experiment. Will NBC stay with it? "Oh, hell yes!" Northshield assured.

Meet the Press producer Lawrence Spivak denied reports that Robert Vaughn had been booked for a September interview in his role as a peace-in-Vietnam advocate. "Yes, we've talked," Spivak conceded. "We talk with a lot of people, but we're not interested in interviewing actors."

An ironic by-product of CBS's play-off this summer of the aborted Coronet Blue series has been its popularity buildup for young actor Frank Converse, who will be starred in a new weekly police drama, N.Y.P.D., on ABC beginning Sept. 5. "If requests we're getting from the fan mags is any indication—and it usually is—he's going to be our biggest star," an ABC flack chortled. "And we owe it all to CBS!"

Lemons Will Clear and Beautify Your Skin

There is nothing finer to keep your skin clear, fresh and fair than the beautifying tonic and the natural cleansing and bleaching properties of lemons in freshener form.

Lemon Jelvyn, the latest type skin freshener that beautiful women throughout the world are now using, braces and conditions the skin to a beautiful new clarity and fine grained texture and its excellent toning and antiseptic properties stimulate the surface cells, clear out stubborn blemish-inducing and pore clogging particles that lead to acne and other skin conditions and leaves the complexion with a fine smooth new beauty.

This lemon Jelvyn skin freshener is now available through most drug stores and is the easiest way to clear and beautify your complexion.

Beauty Skin-Care Consultants Advise

Sometimes when you are hurrying for a date or a late appointment, the easiest way to quell a greasy nose is to sprinkle some lemon Jelvyn on a cotton pad and briskly dab all over the face and nose; dust on a light makeup and then off to your date fresh and confident you will look your best.

* * *

Here's a way to bring a delightful bloom to your complexion. Damp a cloth or tissue with lemon Jelvyn freshener and press over your face, molding it to your features. Lie back for a few minutes while the lemon refreshes and clears the skin. Now to hold the bloom of youthful loveliness, smooth on your oil of Olay and use it always under your makeup to protect against wrinkle dryness and to give the complexion a lastingly dewy look.

* * *

When your complexion seems to be showing signs of keratinization (skin coarsening), brace and clarify the skin by vigorous toning. After cleansing, pat your skin briskly with a cotton pad soaked with lemon Jelvyn skin freshener to clear away blemish-inducing impurities and invisible flakes that cause blackheads and a muddy appearance to the skin. Your complexion will soon regain a smoother texture and radiant youthful appearance.

* * *

For a beautiful smooth neck, toning is of immense value for it prevents the neck and throat from becoming slack and tired. Soak a cotton pad in lemon Jelvyn freshener, and briskly pat both neck and throat in an upward and outward direction. This whips up the circulation so that sluggish skin cells are re-activated, and any tendency to sallowness is corrected.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

The new network-movie season cometh on wobbly cat feet this week, with two television debuts among the reruns. And one of the reruns, "Ironside," serves as a coming attraction since its title-rolist, a wheelchair-bound detective portrayed by the ever-reliable Raymond Burr, becomes the star of a weekly hour-long series of the same name starting on Sept. 14. Sample the two-hour pilot to see if you want to stick with him.

Both premiere movies are of special interest, if not of special quality. "Young Cassidy" is what is known as a Hollywood biographical, a romanticized, scrubbed-up, prettied-up, darlin' pseudo-biography of Sean O'Casey as the Johnny Cassidy of his autobiography. It's a typical life of a great writer, right down to the sheet of paper in the typewriter to tell us that "The Plough and the Stars" is in progress; and despite the feel of Dublin and of the Irish countryside, we wind up with a muscular, ruggedly good-looking Rod Taylor brawling through a stereotyped story. Points of interest are Maggie Smith, utterly believable as the girl Cassidy doesn't win; Dame Edith Evans and Sir Michael Redgrave as the Lady Gregory and Yeats who nurtured the young playwright; and Julie Christie as the total cliché of streetwalker with heart of gold. The point it all proves is that good intentions don't necessarily pave the path to good movies.

The other premiere is of "Beach Party," the granddaddy of all those colorful bits of nonsense about teenage lame-brains surfing and necking and cutting-up on the sun-soaked sands without a trace of family, source of income or sense of social responsibility to interfere with their pointless existence. The special interest, of course, is strictly for sociologists, and camp-minded movie historians.

Hence it's the week's reruns that provide the eternal verities of shadowland and the nice bemusements that Hollywood comedies can provide, and did even in those pre-bikini, long-ago days. "The Sheepman," for example, offers an easygoing bit of cowtown satire wherein the oats are taken with a bag of salt, and plain good humor makes for a pleasant diversion. Glenn Ford is fine as the sheepman who beats out the cattle baron and Shirley MacLaine is her lovely loose-jointed self as the gal he wins.

"Teacher's Pet" provides us with Clark Gable frankly mugging his way through the role of a self-taught city editor who gives Doris Day, a university journalism teacher, her come-uppance and ultimate romance—and the result is a relatively cheerful entertainment. And if you're really relaxed, you'll find "Take Her, She's Mine" an amusing bit of truth-and-nonsense about the growing pains of the all-American father of an all-American "dish." Sandra Dee's a dish indeed — and James Stewart saves Daddy from being the eternal dope. And that's all the salvation at hand.

If Martin Maloney remembered the poker game in the movie version of "The Virginian," his memory must have, as Mark Twain put it, "... improved to include things that never happened." The encounter took place at the bar, and the .45 cannon was not placed on the table, but about two inches to the east of Trampas' navel. Besides—would Coop play poker? It took him most of the movie to get around to telling the girl he er, um, shucks ma'am, loved her.

SOMETHING NEW

It is a sad state of affairs when the most exciting thing about a sports event is the announcer himself ["He Says What He Bloody Well Thinks," Aug. 19]. That is a case with televised "professional" soccer, and CBS's Danny Blanchflower. [We] are tired of feeling insulted by the other sports commentators unsuccessfully trying to "cover up" the mistakes of the players. After all, that's part of the game.

WHO?

I am positive that Burt Prelutsky, who reviewed Coronet Blue in your Aug. 12 issue, is actually Cleveland Amory suffering from amnesia.

SPECIAL COLOR Green Bay Packers vs. Browns at Cleveland. (Taped from tonight's live telecast)

Packers Scouting Report

Veteran observers have said that no other team is in the same league with the world champion Green Bay Packers. But three teams are in the same division. The Bears, Lions and Vikings join the Packers in the new Central Division, where they face a long, cold winter at the hands of Green Bay's shock troops.

Vince Lombardi's juggernaut seems as solid as ever. The defense will be no more generous than it was last year. Quarterback Bart Starr can pass long or short to a corps of veteran ends. Jim Taylor and Paul Hornung are gone, but their replacements are the talented Jim Grabowski and Donny Anderson.

Browns Scouting Report

The Browns will share the Century Division with the Cardinals, Giants and Steelers. Traditionally, the Browns have relied on their running game. Last year, Leroy Kelly and Ernie Green made up for the loss of Jim Brown by leading the Browns to the team rushing championship. Dick Shiner has been acquired from the Redskins to back up Frank Ryan, who may not be fully recovered from the arm trouble he had last year.

On defense, the Browns have a first-rate backfield, but their aging line has proved weak against the run.

SPECIAL COLOR Final-round action in the $200,000 Carling World Golf Championship is telecast from the Board of Trade Golf Club in Toronto.

Cameras cover play at the 14th-18th holes of the par-71, 7024-yard course. The final annual event offers a top prize of $35,000.

The tourney, noted for its international flavor, includes entrants from Canada, Great Britain, Ireland, New Zealand, and various Latin-American and African nations. The defending champion is Australian Bruce Devlin.

In assessing this year's tournament, course director Murray Tucker predicts that a six-under-par 278 might be good enough to take the championship. Undulating greens, Tucker says, could mean a lot of three-putting from the 13th hole on, and a relatively high winning score.

8:30 7 KGO-TV NEWS SPECIAL

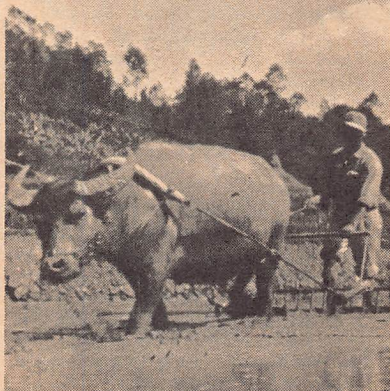

SPECIAL COLOR Roger Grimsby narrates this look at China, focusing on the island of Taiwan and its 80-year-old leader, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

After he was overthrown as ruler of mainland China in 1949, Chiang Kai-shek took control of Taiwan, 100 miles from the mainland. Today, this is the only China the U.S. recognizes diplomatically. With a population of 11 million, and with foreign aid, the island's economic growth is second only to Japan in the Far East.

Included in the half-hour film, the last of Grimsby's three Asian reports, is a comparison of the policies of Communist and Nationalist China and their leaders Mao Tse-tung and Chiang Kai-shek; the life and attitudes of the Chinese people; and scenes of the Taiwan countryside.

Written by Bob Goerge. Filmed by Brian Anderson.

The most fantastic, efficient n

THE BODY

Explore its marvels and my as a guest of the

LIFE SCIENCE LIBRARY

While we marvel at our giant data processing machines, we tend to forget the incredible powers of the human machine which created them...the body. Consider your own brain. It weighs about three pounds, yet a computer big enough to process its daily activities would have to be the size of the Empire State Building. Or consider your fist-sized heart. It pumps 5,500 quarts of blood through 60,000 miles of "tubing" every day. Our bodies are made up of machines within machines. Each of your cells is so tiny that it takes millions of them to form a half inch cube of your body tissue. Yet every one of these cells is an almost unimaginably busy chemical laboratory.

Recent scientific breakthroughs in probing the body's secrets are spectacular and give rise to widespread curiosity on the entire subject. People want to know what a "slipped disc" really is...why babies are born with a "soft spot" in their skulls...how artificial kidneys actually work...what the problems are in transplanting living organs—eyes, for example...the causes of arteriosclerosis...all about "dry surgery" and the machine that makes it possible. Therefore, the Editors of TIME-LIFE BOOKS have brought together all these findings—and more—in THE BODY, introductory volume of the LIFE Science Library. You and your youngsters, through a brilliant text and photo-essay technique, will be fascinated by this colorful volume.

You are invited to examine a copy of THE BODY for 10 days absolutely free. Do so and you'll discover what makes our bones able to withstand 20,000 pounds of pressure per square inch. You'll learn why modern architects study human anatomy to improve the skeletal structure of skyscrapers. You'll explore the workings of our sense organs and see why scientists call them "the network that never sleeps." You'll come to understand the function of the endocrine glands. (It's the adrenalin pumped into his veins that makes an angry man see red.)

Because of vast facilities and large print orders, TIME-LIFE BOOKS is able to offer you

THE BODY at a price far below what you would normally pay for a book of this size, scope and quality—only $3.95 plus a small shipping charge—and an opportunity to examine it before you decide to buy.

THE BODY consists of 200 pages with 35,000 words of text. More than half of the 160 illustrations are in full color. There's a unique tabulation of human variables, a life span world map, a sex differences guide, and a 9-page board game which makes learning physical processes fun.

SEND NO MONEY

It will cost you nothing to examine THE BODY for ten days as the guest of TIME-LIFE BOOKS. If not delighted, return it and owe nothing. But should you feel that you want to own this handsome book and that it will enhance the value of your home library, simply keep it and pay only $3.95 plus shipping.

In that case you will have the privilege of previewing future volumes in the LIFE Science Library, sent at two-month intervals and at the same low price. The same 10-day free examination trial applies to all volumes. You may reject or retain each as you see fit. You may cancel this arrangement at any time simply by notifying us.

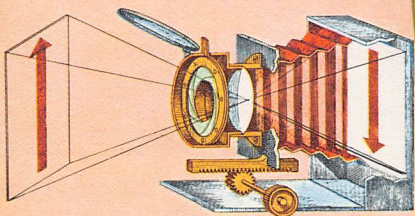

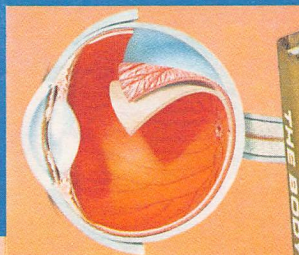

So do fill out and mail the postpaid order form today. The subject is your body. You'll find it fascinating.

for the Blood

...the blood is the lifeblood of the body, and it is the most important part of the body. It is the blood that carries the oxygen and the nutrients to the cells of the body. It is the blood that carries the waste products away from the cells. It is the blood that keeps the body warm. It is the blood that keeps the body healthy. It is the blood that keeps the body alive.

'SHAKEDOWN'

DEBUT COLOR This series paints a tough, realistic portrait of the work of the New York City Police Department. Filmed on location, "N. Y. P. D." utilizes the highly mobile hand-held camera and stream-of-consciousness narrative.

Tonight: Lt. Mike Haines and his two partners, Dets. Jeff Ward and Johnny Corso, investigate a blackmailing ring that specializes in extorting money from homosexuals.

The regulars . . . Jack Warden (Haines) is an alumnus of "The Asphalt Jungle," another TV police series. Frank Converse (Corso) was the amnesiac in "Coronet Blue." Robert Hooks (Ward) starred in Broadway's "Hallelujah, Baby!"

Daniel Petrie directed the debut episode from a script by Albert Ruben.

EVA

BY ROBERT DE ROOS

Since she is one of the world's most-expensively dressed women, I scarcely expected Mrs. Richard Brown to show up in tennis shoes and a middy blouse the night I met her and her husband for dinner at The Bistro in Beverly Hills.

Nor did I expect to be dazzled as I almost was.

She wore a simple white sheath, a simple white ermine jacket, white stockings and white shoes and a large amount of gold and turquoise jewelry and she did gleam and glisten some.

Topped by bouffant blonde hair, she was as blinding as Mont Blanc on a sunny day.

Her name is Mrs. Richard Brown, but she is better known as Eva Gabor, co-star of a TV show called Green Acres.

I had always thought of the Gabor sisters as something like cultured pearls—very pretty but not quite real. What I discovered in Eva Gabor was a very warm woman of considerable naive charm which—in light of her glittering life as an international actress, her experience as the wife of four men and the keen knowledge that a penny saved is a penny earned but a dollar ditto is a hundred times better—could not have been naive but remained charming.

I learned that Eva Gabor is a religious woman, that she is allergic to all but the simplest facial creams—"Darling, my eyes drop out"—that she no longer limits her wardrobe to white and beige, that she does not like garlic and does not smoke.

"Is your name Robert or Bob?" she asked as I sat down beside her. "Bob," I said. "Then that's what we'll call you. Do you know they used to call Richard 'Dick' and even 'Dickie-Wickie'? Can you imagine that?"

Richard Brown and I ordered drinks. Eva Gabor sipped a liqueur glass of Fernet-Branca, a stomachic. "I was feeling a little dizzy and Richard said this would help," she said. "I never drink. It makes me sleepy."

I asked about her dress. "It was designed by Jean Louis," she said. "Oh, I don't know how to spell it. I know four languages and I misspell them all." She did not know what the material was but Mr. Brown, a former textile manufacturer, fingered it and said, "Silk crepe."

There was a slight commotion while people were seated at the next table. They turned out to be Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sully, old friends of Eva's. "I've known Jean for 20 years," Eva whispered to me. "We trapped Robert together. He's very handsome, isn't he? He was sort of stuffy at first but Jean and I unstuffed him." Jean Sully whispered in my other ear. "You'll never find anyone more loyal than Eva," she said. "The best friend there is."

"Your turquoise is lovely," Mrs. Sully said to Eva, who wore a heavy gold and turquoise necklace, earrings and a large ring on her wedding band finger.

"Haven't you seen these?" Eva asked. "This was Richard's present to me on our seventh wedding anniversary."

"You've forgotten," said Richard. "I gave you those for your birthday. Remember, I gave you the sable coat for our anniversary—the one you didn't like and sent back."

"Are you sure, Richard?" Eva said. "I never forget about our anniversaries unless this is the first time."

We cast about for a subject to chew on. "We're interested in just about everything," Eva said. "No, that's not so. Richard is, but there are certain things I don't understand—business, politics, foreign affairs, things like that. I am a woman and I leave the man's part to the man. I think this is a mistake some Amer- continued ican women make: They want to take the man's part. They don't let him be the man while they are the women. I am always very feminine. That is my part."

She was silent for a moment. Then: "I was thinking about Hawaii when I was there last Thanksgiving to visit the soldiers in the hospitals. I don't sing or dance or anything like that. I just talk to the men and they seem to like it. There is a terrible war going on and we don't seem to realize it, but you feel it deeply when you see the wounded men."

Surrounded by the warm scent of Eva Gabor—she uses Bandit, the perfume she has dabbed here and there for many years—I discovered Miss Gabor has a very fine beauty I had not suspected from her pictures. Her nose and mouth are delicate and her eyes are lively and luminous. Her blonde hair was piled lightly above all.

"Is that the real color of your hair?"

"No, darling," she said. "I wish it was. Really it is a kind of mouse brown."

While we ate, I asked her if she was a religious person. "Yes, but I don't like to talk about it," she said. "But, yes, I am. I go to a little Catholic church every morning on my way to work."

Later, having given this some thought, Eva Gabor said very quietly: "I try to do something nice for someone every day, because for 10 years I was punished for doing something bad. I know I was punished—nothing seemed to work out for me all that time."

"The bad thing? I don't like to talk about that. But it was this: When I was very young I left my husband when he was dying—he was dying of leukemia and I left."

"If I had been mercenary, I would have stayed, but I should have stayed anyway. It was a bad thing to do and I was punished for it."

Waiter captain Pierre Borale stopped at the table. "What kind of chocolate soufflé will you have tonight, Mrs. Brown?" he asked.

"I will not have chocolate soufflé and you are a very bad man to suggest it," Eva said. "I will have half a grapefruit and some tea. And please put the rest of my steak in a little bag for the dogs."

I asked Eva if she had a weight problem. "No, darling, because I am round already," she said with fine Hungarian logic. "I would have a problem if I were thinner because then I would have to worry about putting on weight."

We left The Bistro, and the Browns squeezed into Eva's beige Jaguar XKE while I mounted a rent-a-car for the short journey to The Daisy, the exclusive Beverly Hills club for exclusive Beverly Hills people—a discothèque with a built-in pool hall.

I had expected scenes of the wildest abandon in this haven for the elite of Filmdom and Televisiondom, but the exclusive Daisy was almost exclusively empty. "See how it swings," cried Eva.

I filled the lull by asking Eva how she felt—with a fat television series while elder sister Zsa Zsa, most publicized of the sisters, is engaged in advertising automobile transmissions. But Eva did not rise to the bait. "That is hard work," she said. "It is difficult for an actress to feel anything for an automobile transmission."

"The sisters are highly competitive," declared Dick Brown. "There is, I would say, a strong sibling rivalry."

Eva thought a moment and then she said, "I've always had to face the fact that my name is Gabor. On every job I've ever had I could feel re-sentiment. On Green Acres it was the same thing at first. They expected me to be difficult or to be always late. But I am on time when I have a luncheon date—why should I be late when 50 people are involved in the show. I have been an actress a long time and I know the craft. I have studied all my life, but they can never accept me as a competent actress. There is always the undercurrent: 'Here's one of the Gabor girls.'

"I want to be an actress and that is a severe illness. When this series came along, I asked Richard what to do and he said to take the test. I would have done whatever he suggested—or maybe I would have taken the test anyway.

"I thought, 'What if I don't? How will I feel in five years if I don't take this opportunity?' I'd be frustrated, I knew. So Richard left everything to come out here with me."

"I thought the series would probably last only six months or so," Dick laughed. "And I figured I could commute from New York for that long—but now we are here, it seems."

"Richard gives me security," Eva said. "He can support me, but I don't mean that. There is no security in money—that comes and goes. Richard gives me real security."

I asked Dick Brown how he felt.

"I feel like a Jewish mother," he laughed. He is now vice president of the company which produces Green Acres and likes to say, "Eva works for me."

Eva thought for a moment. "Green Acres is wonderful," she said. "I have had successes before but never anything like this because nothing is like TV."

And the last thing she said that night was: "Darling, you know where we live and have the phone numbers. We expect you to come up the next time you're in town."

I had the feeling she meant it. The darling.

How to make

Well, first you get into

There are two ways to examine a 36-hole golf tournament in which first prize is $50,000. Some see it as exhibitionism that tends to make a mockery of everyday endeavor in sports. It amounts to almost twice what Jack Nicklaus won in the 72-hole U.S. Open. It is roughly what Sandy Koufax earned in five World Series. Willie Shoemaker must win a half-million in purses in order to gross $50,000 for himself. And John Unitas plays almost a whole season for such a sum.

The other school of thought is that a law has yet to be written telling a guy he can't give away his money. The point was raised last year in Chicago at the Arlington-Washington Futurity, the world's richest thoroughbred race, whose gross value runs upward of $350,000. The proprietress of Arlington Park, Marjorie Lindheimer Everett, remarked: "Who is to tell the Giants how much to pay Willie Mays? And if the New York Jets want to give their quarterback [Joe Namath] $400,000, that's their business."

Roughly, this is the attitude of Chicago promoter Walter Schwimmer, originator of World Series of Golf, which will be seen live over NBC next weekend (Sept. 9 and 10) from Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio. A two-day show, conceived entirely for television, World Series is an exclusive event in that the entrants number only four. The golfers play in one foursome for prizes amounting to $77,500. Second prize is $15,000. Third is $7500, and fourth $5000.

Crashing World Series isn't the easiest job for a player. Its field comprises the winners of the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA. If a golfer wins two or more of the foregoing tournaments, World Series fills its field of four from alternate events.

Producer of Championship Bowling, Championship Bridge, All-Star Golf and other TV sports shows, Schwimmer got the idea for World Series of Golf in 1962 and took it to NBC. "Unaccountably, the network didn't share my enthusiasm for the show," he recalls. "Before it would put the tournament on the air, it made me guarantee time costs in the event World Series wound up without a sponsor. To put it bluntly, I was on the hook for 300,000 bucks if the show didn't sell. Luckily for me, it did."

The first World Series was scheduled in Akron on the same weekend as the Denver Open, a conflict that didn't gladden the heart of the Professional Golfers' Association. To help chill the beef, NBC delayed the World Series telecast in Denver and Schwimmer even ran ads in the local newspapers, encouraging fans to back their tournament in town. Of course, the ads also suggested that the fans watch World Series on TV when they got home that night.

To mollify the PGA the next three years, Schwimmer contributed $20,000 annually to the tournament running concurrently with World Series. In the World Series of Golf, and then...BY MELVIN DURSLAG

1963, for instance, the kitty of the $20,000 Utah Open was doubled by the new windfall.

The PGA has developed a habit of collecting tribute from sponsors who stage events to which the whole golfing membership isn't invited. The Tournament of Champions in Las Vegas once was asked for $5000 to sweeten the pot of a tournament that ran concurrently in Lafayette, La. Grudgingly, the boys paid off, even though they felt no kinship to Lafayette, where craps aren't even legal.

From a modest beginning in which it got free ads and a small fee, the PGA has worked up to partner in World Series. In exchange for "official status," by which his show no longer would be classified as an exhibition, Schwimmer gave 20 percent of the package to the PGA last year. Beginning in 1969, and for five years, the PGA will take 50 percent, after which it will take 75 percent.

It has occurred more than once to the seasoned sports follower that a $77,500 event contested among only four golfers could lead to collusion. That is, no one would be suspected of throwing the match, but purse splitting could be a possibility.

Purse splitting is against PGA law, but it is believed that golfers on occasion have winked at the rule, particularly in cases where a pair of hungry players have advanced to a play-off and have needed the money.

Asked if he felt golfers would split fees quietly in World Series today, a prominent member of the PGA confided: "It would be extremely doubtful in this age of big money. Very few who get into the World Series these days are hungry. Golfers basically are gamblers. If they aren't desperate for the money, they would rather take a shot at the $50,000 first prize all for themselves. In a normal tournament a man faces maybe 149 opponents. In the World Series he has to beat only three. The odds are appealing."

Televising World Series presents a unique problem in that only one foursome is involved. How does the network sustain the action between the time the contestants hit their shots and stroll to their lies? "Strangely," says Chet Simmons, sports director for NBC, "it gives us time to do things we aren't able to do in the average tournament. We are able to pre-tape inserts with the golfers and drop them into our show during our free time."

Those qualifying for this year's World Series are Gay Brewer (Masters), Jack Nicklaus (U.S. Open), Roberto de Vincenzo (British Open) and Don January (PGA).

The presence of De Vincenzo, the South American star, recalls a deathless golf discussion one day in Las Vegas between Joe E. Lewis and this correspondent. Asked if he ever had heard of Roberto de Vincenzo, Joe appeared hurt. "Are you kidding?" he answered. "The Mona Lisa will live forever."

IT'S FUN, IT'S FAST, IT'S FONDUE

A large, ornate ceramic fondue pot with a yellow rim and a black and gold patterned body is filled with a creamy white fondue sauce. A small piece of bread is being dipped into the sauce. The pot sits on a metal stand, and several fondue forks and knives are visible in the foreground.

FOR RECIPES

The Swiss have a word for it: "Fondue"—the gayest party food and ice-breaker. Who can be formal while dunking and eating this delicious food? A main dish and a dessert fondue to suit all occasions—and both are simple enough to stir together at the last minute. Tradition has it that the person who wipes up the last bit in the fondue pot gets kissed by all at the party. And the crust left in the bottom of the pot is cut into pieces and served to all.

SWISS CHEESE FONDUE

Serves 8

- | | |
|--|---------------------------------|
| ½ clove garlic | 2 tbsp. flour |
| 1½ cups Neuchatel or other dry white wine | Salt and freshly ground pepper |
| 2 pounds natural Swiss cheese* | Bite-size cubes of French bread |

*not processed, only well-aged natural Emmentaler Swiss cheese will do

Use an earthenware fondue pot or other pot that is not metal. Use a wooden spoon for stirring—metal affects the flavor and color of a cheese fondue. Rub the pot with the clove of garlic. Add wine and place over low heat, either on the range or over a warmer. Heat the wine until it just bubbles. Low, gentle heat is important because high heat will cause the cheese to become stringy and rubbery. Grate cheese and mix with the flour, drop by handfuls into wine, stirring after each addition until cheese is almost melted. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Keep hot over low heat, stirring occasionally to keep a skin from forming. To serve, spear pieces of bread on fondue or other forks with long handles and dunk into cheese fondue. After pot is emptied pull off crust at bottom and cut into serving pieces.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 3 bars (3 oz. each) triangular-shaped chocolate and nougat (Toblerone bars) | 2 tbsp. brandy, Cointreau, coffee liqueur or peppermint liqueur, or 1 tbsp.
instant coffee |
| ½ cup heavy cream | |

Bite-size cubes of sponge or angel-food cake, marshmallows, grapes, pineapple chunks, dried apricots, banana chunks

Break chocolate into pieces. Combine with cream in a small saucepan over low heat on the range or over a warmer. Stir until melted and smooth. Stir in brandy. Keep warm. Spear pieces of cake or fruit on forks and dip.

The 7 Minute Cigarette. What makes it tick?

We could tell you a lot of things.

Like, it smokes longer,
because it is longer.

But to find out what makes it tick, don't listen.

Taste.

Pall Mall Gold 100's

Mild taste in a longer length.
